WHAT IS I&R?

I&R is a unique service that provides information on family matters, equal education for women and girls, workplace issues and discrimination.

CWEALF's I&R staff help clients navigate the systems involved in these cases by explaining the law in easy to understand terms.

CWEALF supplements this basic information service by providing referrals to attorneys and other service providers.

CWEALF provides advocacy services when individuals encounter obstacles to resolving their legal issues. CWEALF's goal is to work with clients to remove any barriers and provide them with information and resources to navigate the rest of the process independently.

No other agency provides this combination of legal education and advocacy, for FREE!

FAQs

What is the income eligibility for this service?

There is no income eligibility; anyone who has a legal or social service issue can call.

Who will answer my call?

We have trained volunteers who help individuals resolve their issues

Do you serve men too?

Yes, anyone who has a legal issue can call.

Can I meet an advocate in person?

Yes. Our Community Advocate is fluent in English and Spanish and is available to meet people in both Hartford and New Haven. To schedule an appointment, please call (860)-247-6090.

Daytime and evening hours available.

DO YOU PROVIDE LEGAL REPRESENTATION?

CWEALF does not provide direct legal representation. We maintain a Cooperating Attorney Network (CWEALF C.A.N.), consisting of local attorneys who accept referrals from CWEALF. These attorneys provide a free initial consultation and will work out a payment plan or sliding scale fee for CWEALF's clients.

CWEALF also provides community education to small groups to provide more in-depth information about a particular legal issue. Individuals learn more about their rights through workshops and clinics on topics like family law and sexual harassment.
